

Fossil Prokaryotes and Protists

William A. S. Sarjeant

Volume 21, Number 4, December 1994

URI: https://id.erudit.org/iderudit/geocan21_4br02

See table of contents

Publisher(s)

The Geological Association of Canada

ISSN

0315-0941 (print)

1911-4850 (digital)

Explore this journal

Cite this review

Sarjeant, W. A. S. (1994). Review of [Fossil Prokaryotes and Protists]. Geoscience Canada, 21(4), 180–180.

Fossil Prokaryotes and Protists

Edited by Jere H. Lipps
Blackwell Scientific Publications
 Boston and London
 342 p., 1993, $70.95

Reviewed by William A.S. Sarjeant
Department of Geological Sciences
University of Saskatchewan
 Saskatoon, Saskatchewan S7N 0W0

Almost 15 years ago, Helen Tappan's The Paleobiology of Plant Protists provided the first detailed overview of that group of microscopic organisms, in a substantial hard-backed volume. The work was too costly to be recommended for purchase to students and was, in any case, too detailed to make an ideal student text, even for advanced classes in palynology. Martin Brasier's Microfossils, published in the same year, furnished, in contrast, an admirable text for undergraduate classes and stayed in print much too briefly, while subsequent texts — Erdtman's Handbook of Palynology, recently republished in second edition, and Alfred Traverse's Paleopalynology — have not dealt with prokaryotes or with protists having mineralized walls. This new work thus fills a gap in paleontological literature. If its price be again undesirably high, the purchaser can at least take comfort in the fact that the royalties are to be shared by the Paleontological Society and Cushman Foundation!

It is a particular pleasure that the various groups of organisms are treated in a reasonably balanced fashion; thus the foraminifera, so long the darlings of micropaleontologists, occupy only as many pages as the radiolarians and calcareous nannoplankton. Dinoflagellates and diatoms are arguably somewhat shortweighted, but the page allocation to acritarchs and prasino-phytes is properly substantial, and the briefer treatments of other groups are proportionate to our present knowledge of them.

Yet, I do have a few quarrels with the contents of this work. Archeomonads gain only the briefest of mentions (p. 141), their morphology not being discussed or illustrated. The phosphatic-walled, acritarch-like muellerispherids and the intriguing ophiobolids gain no mention at all. The exclusion of the chitinozoans, although regrettable, is understandable, since Patrick Cashman's demonstration of their protist character (1990) probably came too late for them to be taken into account: up to that time, chitinozoans had been treated conventionally as cysts or egg-cases of higher animals.

The diagrams are clear and the photographs — mostly scanning-electron micrographs — very well reproduced. The page size is somewhat too large for convenience in handling and shelving. A second edition of more modest size, at a lower cost, would serve excellently as a class text: the pages are spacious enough to lose little in reduction. At the present price, though, I suspect that few instructors will be happy about listing this as a class text, and I am quite sure that, if they do, students will be reluctant to buy it. That is a pity, for it is certainly the best book on this theme yet to be made available.

REFERENCES

- Brasier, M.D., 1980, Microfossils: George Allen & Unwin, London, 193 p.
 Cashman, P.B., 1990, The affinity of the chitinozoans: new evidence: Modern Geology, v. 15, p. 59-69.
 Nilsson, S. and Praglowski, J., eds., 1992, Erdtman's Handbook of Palynology (2nd edition, revised): Munksgaard, Copenhagen, 580 p.
 Tappan, H., 1980, The Paleobiology of Plant Protists: Freeman, San Francisco, 1028 p.
 Traverse, A., 1988, Paleopalynology: Unwin Hyman, Boston, 600 p.

GEOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION OF CANADA (May 1994-1995)

Officers

President
 Fred J. Longstaffe

Vice-President
 Marie-Claire Ward

Secretary-Treasurer
 Elliott T. Burden

Past President
 R. Frank Blackwood

Committee Chairmen
 Awards: Fred Longstaffe

Education:
 Finance: Baxter F. Kean
 Membership Review: Elliott Burden
 Nominating: Frank Blackwood
 Program: Hugh Hendry
 Publications: Monica G. Easton

The Geological Association of Canada acknowledges, with gratitude, the support of the following corporate members (1994)

Companies

American Barrick Resources Corporation
 Amoco Canada Petroleum Co.
 Asarco Exploration Co. of Canada Ltd.
 Aur Resources Inc.
 Billiton Metals Canada Inc.
 Canadian Hunter Exploration Ltd.
 Chevron Canada Resources Limited
 Cogema Canada Ltée.
 Cominco Ltd.
 Falconbridge Ltd.
 Gulf Canada Resources Ltd.
 Husky Oil Operations
 Kennecott Exploration
 Lac Minerals Ltd.
 Metall Mining Corp.
 Mobil Oil Canada
 Monopros Limited
 Norcen Energy Resources
 PanCanadian Petroleum Ltd.
 Placer Dome Inc.
 PNC Exploration (Canada) Co. Ltd.
 Rio Algom Exploration Inc.
 Serem Quebec Inc.
 Shell Canada Resources
 Suncor Inc.
 Unocal Canada Ltd.

Universities

Carleton University
 Memorial University of Newfoundland
 University of Toronto
 University of Waterloo

Government Agencies

Geological Survey of India
 Newfoundland Department of Mines and Energy
 Royal Tyrrell Museum
 of Palaeontology