

Lettres québécoises
La revue de l'actualité littéraire

Susceptible de Geneviève Castrée

Jordan Beaulieu

Number 173, Spring 2019

URI: <https://id.erudit.org/iderudit/90409ac>

See table of contents

Publisher(s)

Lettres québécoises inc.

ISSN

0382-084X (print)

1923-239X (digital)

Explore this journal

Cite this document

Beaulieu, J. (2019). Susceptible de Geneviève Castrée. Lettres québécoises, (173), 98–100.

Tous droits réservés © Lettres québécoises inc., 2019

This document is protected by copyright law. Use of the services of Érudit (including reproduction) is subject to its terms and conditions, which can be viewed online.

<https://apropos.erudit.org/en/users/policy-on-use/>

érudit

This article is disseminated and preserved by Érudit.

Érudit is a non-profit inter-university consortium of the Université de Montréal, Université Laval, and the Université du Québec à Montréal. Its mission is to promote and disseminate research.

<https://www.erudit.org/en/>

At age seventeen, Geneviève Castrée and my paternal grandfather were the two Quebecers I most admired, though, I had never met either of Castrée's "Susceptible" in 2013, a few months before I moved to Quebec to begin school in Montreal

There were many things I didn't have in common with "Goglu", but I related to her as a lonely teenager, making drawings late at night in my bedroom, the most creative space I've ever known.

"Susceptible" is an autobiographical

coming of age
story,

Set in Quebec and sometimes British Columbia during the 80s and 90s.

Rereading
it makes me feel like a child,

who perceive injustice
most clearly

and reject
in a way unfairness most wholeheartedly.
it's a wonderful thing to be reminded of.

I love the book. I love the music she made as a Paon. I love the way she draws snow.

That is no summer in her drawings, only the wet of the Pacific Northwest, and the cold of Quebec.

