CONTRIBUTORS / COLLABORATEURS

Christopher Dummitt is an Assistant Professor in the Department of History at Trent University. He is the author of The Manly Modern: Masculinity in the Postwar Years (Vancouver 2007) and, with Michael Dawson eds, Contesting Clio's Craft: New Directions and Debates in Canadian History (London 2009). He is currently writing a book that explores what debates over former Canadian prime minister Mackenzie King can tell us about Canadian culture and politics from the 1950s through to the 1980s.

Dustin Galer is a PhD candidate in History at the University of Toronto studying the advocacy and employment of disabled persons in Canada, disability rights, and economic citizenship for people with disabilities in a contemporary historical framework.

Paul Jackson is the author of One of the Boys: Homosexuality in the Military during World War II, which was recently released by McGill-Queen's in a second edition. He is working with a number of artisans in Port-au-Prince to establish a fair trade enterprise connecting Haitian workers and Canadian consumers.

Roberta Lexier currently holds the Bell Postdoctoral Fellowship in the Centre for Canadian Studies at Mount Allison University. She has published extensively on the Sixties student movement in Canada.

Ian Milligan is a PhD candidate in the Department of History at York University. His dissertation examines the interplay between the English-Canadian New Left and the working-class during the sixties and early seventies.

Chad Pearson teaches history part-time at the University of Alabama in Huntsville. He received his PhD in 2008 from the University at Albany, SUNY and is currently writing a book about employers' associations and anti-union activism in the US during the Progressive Era.

John Peters is an assistant professor of political science at Laurentian University, Sudbury Ontario. He is one of the editors of the forthcoming collection, Boom, Bust, and Crisis: Work and Labour in 21st Century Canada (Fernwood). He is currently completing a study on the impacts of globalization on labour movements and public policy in North America and Western Europe.

Habiba Zaman is a Professor in Gender, Sexuality, and Women's Studies at Simon Fraser University. Currently on sabbatical, she is a Visiting Professor at the Centre for Women's and Gender Studies and in Race, Autobiography, Gender and Age Studies (RAGA), University of British Columbia.
